

Monica Graham is a free-lance journalist, photographer, and columnist. She has written for the Halifax Chronicle Herald since 1996, covering news and writing a regular column for the paper's religion page. She has also written travel, business, historical, nature, religion, and science features. Her work has also appeared in Canadian Living, Trident, The Atlantic Fisherman, and various other publications. She published a short story in a recent anthology, Don't Worry, We'll Have Christmas Tomorrow.

A former employee of the Pictou Advocate, Monica's historical and column writing have won her national and regional community newspaper awards.

A long-time resident of Pictou County, Nova Scotia, Monica is currently completing a biography of Peter Owen (Peachie) Carroll, a Nova Scotia police detective who worked in eastern Canada between 1884 and 1925.

Publications

Scotch Willy and Other Nicknames from Pictou County (2006)

The Historic Town of Pictou (2004)

Pictou County, Nova Scotia (2003)

Updated 11-28-07